Reading 1: (10 Marks)

Read the following article about “SKILLS for 21st Century” and then answer the questions that follow accordingly.

What are the skills that people need to have in today's workplace? What does this mean for the careers that they have? And their lives in general? What does it mean for the companies that employ them? We asked Imogen Roberts, an expert in 21st century skills. Here is a selection of her answers.

1. 'We live in a global economy and we are part of a global community. So people need to know how different countries and groups relate to each other. They need to understand cultural differences and to appreciate these. Everyone has a responsibility to society and to the environment. So the questions that 21st century employees often ask are: Does my company or organization help society? Does it inspire me? If the answer is 'no', they look for other work.'
2. 'In today's workplace, interpersonal skills are very important. This is because many of the jobs we do involve collaboration. So when you attend meetings, speak to people face-to-face or on the phone, or correspond with them by email, you need to build good relations. People are not always easy to work with and sometimes in your work you have to deal with conflict and difficult situations.'
3. 'We get information now in many ways and these ways are changing constantly. Today's worker has, to process huge amounts of written and visual information. So they have to think critically about this information and they need to understand technology and to choose the best way to connect with it. They also have to be creative and, above all, they have to want to gain knowledge.'
4. 'The 21st century world moves fast. So you need to be quick and you need to be efficient. Employers expect this, so employees need to be organized and they need to be able to prioritize tasks- to distinguish between what is important and what is not- so they work more efficiently. At the same time, companies have to recognize that work is not everything: people want time to stand back from their work and they want time to relax and have fun.'
5. 'In the age of technology that we are living in now, it is no longer enough to keep on making the same products. Employers need people who can form and have new approaches and new ideas. Think: think of an object or gadget you use every day. How could it be improved? Can you picture new improvements in your head?'

Reading 2: (10 Marks)

Read the following article and then answer the questions that follow accordingly.

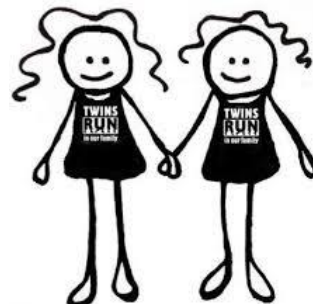

Twin minds think alike

Telepathy is the ability to communicate with someone else by using your mind. The communication could include anything from transferring thoughts, feelings or other kinds of information. There are three groups that are thought to have telepathic abilities: dogs and their owners, a mother and her newborn baby and identical twins. Of these groups, twins have the strongest telepathic connection. Scientists believe that this is true because identical twins share the same brain waves, which allows both of them to experience and feel things at the same time, even when they are not in the same place.

Many studies have been done regarding the phenomena of the twin psychic connection, but a 2003 study that took place in a London TV studio puts to rest many doubts people may have of the existence of twin telepathy. Eight-year-old Damien and Richard Powles sat in separate soundproof rooms in the studio. Richard was told to roll up his sleeve and put his arm into a bucket of ice water. He gasped from the shock of the cold. Meanwhile, Damien, who was in his room and unaware of what was happening to his brother, also gasped at the same time. Damien was attached to a polygraph machine, which monitored his breathing, stomach muscles, pulse and the amount of sweat on the palms of his hands. Professional polygrapher Jeremy Barrett was recording the results and analyzing them. Neither Damien nor Barrett knew what was going on in the other room at any time during the experiment. In the next experiment, Richard was asked to open a cardboard box placed in front of him. Instead of something pleasant like chocolate in the box, a plastic snake jumped out at him, frightening him. Barrett said that at the exact moment, Damien showed signs of distress through his heart rate and pulse line.

There are many other stories of instances like this between twins. Two young girls, one at a party at another house and one at home, are a good example. The young girl that was at home burnt her hand. At the same moment, the other girl at the party developed the same kind of blister in the exact same spot on her hand as her sister. Another example is a man who collapsed in a chair, clutching his chest in pain at the exact moment his twin brother was shot in the chest more than 30 miles away. There may never be definitive proof that all identical twins have telepathic powers, but there is enough evidence to suggest that this kind of psychic connection is possible.
